PERSONAL.

DR. W. C. COUDEN, late of Louisville, has arrived in the city, and, we learn, expects to make Memphis his future home. MISS LUCY BOWEN, of Winchester valley, Virginia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Arthur Wheatley, 368 Vance street, for the winter. Miss Minnie Weaver, a popular and charming young lady, of Huntsville, Alabama, is in the city on a visit to her friends and relatives. She seems to be as fresh and blooming as the air and roses of her native mountains. WE were gratified yesterday to find behind the counter of W. H. Seabrook & Co., wholesale and retail druggists, 335 Main street, our old friend William S. Fifer, one of the safest and most careful druggists in Mem-phis. Mr. Fifer will give additional popu-larity to the house of W. H. Seabrook & Co., street, 230 Second, and 158 Beal streets—and having a large stock of the best Pittsburg coal, all customers may be assured that their orders will receive prompt attention and be filled at the lowest cash prices. The interest of the late Mr. Frank Wait in the ice business has been purchased by his late partner, Joseph H. M'Cormick, who will partner, Joseph H. M'Cormick, who will continue the business at the old stand. As Mr. M'Cormick has a large reserve stock of ice in the Illinois river, and towboat and fleet of barges, with ample facilities for cutting and storing ice, the people of Memphis may rely upon a continuance of the ice opposition which, during the past season,

STARTLING REVELATIONS!

Disclosures! Disclosures!

Affecting the Interest of Every Male Citizen of Memphis and the Territory Adjacent.

There are few interests so closely guarded as is the moneyed interest, and none that, in times like the present, require more wakefor and Argus-eyed care. "Economy" has be and Argus-eyed care. "Economy" has be-come the watchword of the south; "How to economise?" the enigma of the day. Cornelius O'Dowd very pertinently asks: the deuce is a fellow to economise when he has nothing-to econmise with? We can assert, however, with safety, that we have opened one door leading to economy which we invite our friends, patrons, and the general public to avail themselves of, and that is in offering them the garments they wear at prices that really represent little more than one-half their real intrinsic value. Our stock was never so complete, never replete with choice novelties in dress and business suits, gentlemen's overcoats for fall and winter wear; also, warm overcoats for youths' and boy's, and suits to suit the youngstory. Probably those city fathers who passed sters. Furnishing goods ad infinitum, the ordinance, some years ago, did not know adapted to every taste and all at such prices as will be a revelation, a startling revelation, of cheapness, to the closest-fisted purchaser

We are opposed to the supervisory system because, in no possible view of the case, can it be of any advantage either to us or to our customers, but, on the contrary, would dam age both. It would damage our customer i this, that the expense incurred in the suppor of this system would, in some way or other, come out of his pocket, and would damag us, because our customer would not willing ubmit to any additional expense in the handling of his cotton. If the system of storing and handling cotton in Memphis was similar to that of New Orleans, we might favor some sort of supervisory system, but being entirely different, we fail to see the force of the argument you make that Memphis should adopt these regulations because New Orleans has done so. In the latter city all cotton, on arrival, is delivered to publ into the hands of the purchaser. In Mer phis it goes directly into the hands of the factor, or to his immediate employer, and remains there until it is sold and delivered Now, we submit, is there any necessity, under such a system as this, for the maugura-
